Monster poem

My breakfast beast lives in the toaster. His stomach is made up of a toaster waffle. His head is a mini pancake and his eyes are chocolate chips. His frown is made of a half-eaten doughnut and his one tooth is a small strawberry piece. His drool is bitter sweet coffee. His arms and legs are strips of bacon. The palms of his hands and his feet are small chunks of a chocolate cookies. His long fingers and toes are half cooked Hash browns. You would think as a monster he would have some wacky hair but my breakfast beast's head is as bare as a baby's bottom.

There you have it my ferocious beast who lives in the toaster until it is time to feast.

Sweets Monster

Have you ever heard of the Sweets Monster?

Well, if you haven't I am about to tell you.

The sweets monster had a crave for sweets. He had chocolate syrup for his hair. His eyes where cherries. His fur was coconut skin. His finger and toenails where chocolate chips. His mouth was starbursts. He was made out of villinall cake. His nose was made out of a hoe hoe. That is the sweets monster for ya.

Monster Poem

RAYMON the DEMON MONSTER

You may not know the devil had a pet. For if you did the devil would be upset. (you will be ok as long as you go to heaven) He has sharp teeth and breaths fire. he has some horns with knives on each end. He is all red and eats fire for meals but beware he eats children for appetisers. He walks on hands hooves and claws and sews human cheeks for hats. So as you can see you better stay on the good side for if you don't you'll be next.
